SKETCHING PORTFOLIO.

The same article as above, enclosed in Portfolio, with Pocket for Sketches and Pencil Case.

BARTHOLOMEW'S SKETCHING DESK.

This ingenious contrivance is very light and portable. It consists of a 4to imperial penned frame, on which several sheets of paper may be strained at once, a pocket to keep the sketches in when taken off the frame, and a lever, which by a peculiar arrangement supports the desk very firmly, leaving the hands of the artist disengaged.

FRENCH PUMP, OR HYDRAULIC INKSTAND.

Directions for Use.—Turn the top from right to left, till you feel resistance; then remove the top plate by unscrewing the nuts on each side, and pour the ink in till you see it rise up to the bottom of the Dipping Places; when this is done, screw the plate on again. By turning the Top from left to right, the ink will be brought in a pure state into the Dipping Places, and when you have finished writing, may as easily be turned off again by the reverse motion.

The peculiar and exclusive advantages of this Inkstand are—

1.—The great simplicity of its principle and construction, which prevents it ever getting out of order.

2.—The ink is not exposed to atmospheric air, and consequently can neither evaporate nor become impure from dust or dirt.

3.—There is no complicated mechanical contrivance attached to it; and any servant can with the greatest ease, thoroughly clean the inkstand, when it should become necessary to do so.

RATCLIFF'S PATENT INKSTAND.

To fill the inkstand, unscrew the stopper, and pour the ink into the dipping place; screw the stopper on again; by turning the glass one way the ink will rise into the dipping place; by reversing the motion, it will descend into the reservoir. This action continues until the ink is exhausted, when the glass must be turned as far back as it will go, to prepare it to receive a fresh supply.

CLARKE'S INDELIBLE INK.

A Caution to Families.—Pilfering is becoming so notorious, that it behoves families, gentlemen travelling, and others, to adopt those measures which may as much as possible contribute to prevent and detect it. In the article of linen or cotton apparel, silk and cotton stockings, table linen, &c., this cannot be better effected than by marking such property with CLARKE'S INDELIBLE PERMANENT INK, which from a test of 50 years is found to be an improvement on the common durable or permanent Ink, and much superior to any of those Inks which are used without a preparation.
